FASHION'S FOIBLES

BURNING INSTEAD OF BEAUTY.

on of Rev. G. M Shott at the First Bap Theme-Rev. Dr. Smith Preaches at Fourth Street Church on Manhood.

Rev. G. M. Shott, paster of the First Baptist Church, last night preached a ser on on the evils of following the extremes of fashion. His text was the last clause f the twenty-fourth verse of the third chapter of Isaiah, "Burning instead of ceauty." He said he had been requeste to devote a sermon to this "craze." Fashion reasserts its lunacy and reminds one of intermittent levers. Beauty often clouds her bewitching face with gaudy paint and plaster that would make a wall of coarser clay look common. I wish beauty would let herself alone. An untarnished blush is the finest coloring for a tarnished blush is the linest coloring for a female cheek. Whitewash can never hide the wrinkles of sge or dissipation. The sweetest laces are often graced by the frill of a beautiful old-fashioned cap. There is beauty in wrinkles on modest faces. There is nothing so hideous as a caricature on human nature.

AN INDEX OF CHARACTER.

Character is portrayed in dress. Show me the wardrobe and library and I will reproduce their owner and make her plead guilty. There is no other such an index to the real life within the soul as the dreas we wear outside. The way we walk is a mark of the character of our lives. Why is so much made of dress by fashionable women? They are deluded into the dream women? They are delaided into the dream that thus they are made more beautiful. They are more attractive, 'tis true, but not more beautiful. I believe our clothes ought to be made neatly and becomingly, and worn gracefully and naturally. Take a graceful horse and dress him in a straight jacket laced about his ribs till you push his lungs into his wind-pipe, lace a pair of high-heeled boots upon his graceful feet, may-pole-weave a dozen yards of ribbon about his arched neck, tighten the marmay-poie-weave a duzen yards or ribbon about his arched neck, tighten the mar-tingale, shorten the throat latch, girdle a huge panier on his back, put a sunilower on his box m, a bottle of perinme in his hand and a frizzled poodle on his arm and you have a very attractive but not a beau-tiful spectacle.

A woman thinks herself beautiful when

A woman thinks herself beautiful when she piles a vast assortment of dry goods upon her body, paints her eye-brows, enamels her face, crops her foretop and puts the girth buckle in the last notch and compels herself to mince her footsteps like a crippled wasp as she gees "shopping." Some attention was devoted also to dudes; but more to firsts. Said the speaker: The awatest picture of beauty is often. The sweetest picture of beauty is often seen smilling beneath an old-lashioned seen smiling beneath an our-assuoned sun-bonnet. Among the Quakers, in their simple, plain dress, you will not search in vain to find sparkling beauty. Modesty is oftener found clad in calico and a white apron than in the vain dress circle of some theatre or avenue of display.

Some plain warnings were given to young girls and their parents, and the need of these illustrated by instances coming under Dr. Shott's own observations: Could I permit myself to speak at length I might relate sects that have come under
